

An overabundance of CB1 signaling has been associated with increased psychoactivity, systemic inflammation, cardiovascular risk, diabetes and obesity.

In contrast, CB2 over-activation and dominance could lead to decreased immune function and diminished wound healing.